

Stevenson Gossage is a graduate student at Carleton University in Ottawa, Canada. Stevenson has was born in Australia, grew up in Canada and lived several years in Mexico; he is fluent in English and Spanish. In Mexico he managed the computer systems at a Green Giant mushroom farm and subsequently was in charge of a small Internet Service Provider who was attempting to bring wireless internet to remote locations of Mexico, which lacked the necessary infrastructure. His interests include Agile software design and development, Human Computer Interaction and multitouch surfaces. Stevenson is currently working on development of the next generation of a multitouch capable Agile software design tool.